

Table I: Vowels

Pure Vowels
S. No.	IPA Symbol	As in
1.	/i:/	see, thief, beat, key, funny
2.	/ɪ/	myth, hit
3.	/e/	let, bread, said
4.	/æ/	bad, mad
5.	/ɑ:/	car, bar
6.	/ɒ/	dot, shot
7.	/ɔ:/	born, fall,
8.	/ʊ/	push, could
9.	/u:/	school, clue, pew, suit, coup,
10.	/ʌ/	cut, touch, some
11.	/ɜ:/	herd, bird
12.	/ə/	ahead, again

Table 2: Consonants

Consonants
S. No.	IPA Symbol	As in
1.	/p/	pat, put
2.	/b/	but, bush
3.	/t/	seat, wit
4.	/d/	dear, dirty
5.	/k/	kiss, car
6.	/g/	get, gun
7.	/tʃ/	choose, batch
8.	/dʒ/	just, jest
9.	/f/	father, fun
10.	/v/	vital, love
11.	/θ/	health, wealth
12.	/ð/	this, that
13.	/s/	sit, sing
14.	/z/	zoo, rose
15.	/ʃ/	shall, competition
16.	/ʒ/	measure, pleasure
17.	/h/	horse, hut
18.	/m/	monkey, mat
19.	/n/	not, can
20.	/ŋ/	ring, long
21.	/l/	luck, alone, full
22.	/r/	run, rat
23.	/j/	pure, tune
24.	/w/	swim, wonder

SILENT LETTERS

In English language, the pronunciation of several words requires the silencing of certain letters at the beginning, within or at the end. These letters are known as silent letters. For example, take the word 'plumber' - many Indians pronounce it as 'plum-ber'. But in British English it is /plʌ.mə/. The 'b' need not be pronounced here. Similarly, in 'debris', 's' is silent. The chart below shows how different letters become silent in many words.

silent letters	b	comb, tomb
	c	muscle
	ch	yacht
	d	handkerchief
	e	rope, come
	g	campaign, sign
	gh	thought, light
	h	hour, honest
	i	business, parliament
	k	knife, knee
	'l' before 'd', 'f', 'm', 'k'	calm, half, salmon, talk, would n	autumn, hymn
	'p' before 's', 'n'	psychiatrist, pneumonia, cupboard, coup
	s	island, isle
	t	castle, fasten, whistle
	th	asthma, isthmus
	u	guess
	'w' before 'r', 'h'	wrap, write, who, whose, whom x	faux
	z	rendezvous

Diphthongs

1.	/eɪ/	date, fail, May
2.	/aɪ/	sight, cry, guy
3.	/ɔɪ/	boy, coil
4.	/əʊ/	nose, low, gold
5.	/aʊ/	cow, house
6.	/ɪə/	here, dear, deer
7.	/eə/	air, hare
8.	/ʊə/	poor, moor

PARTS OF SPEECH

Words are the building blocks of communication. These words form the seven basic parts of speech:

nouns, pronouns, verbs, adjectives, adverbs, prepositions and conjunctions.

NOUNS

A noun is a naming word. It is the name of a person, place, thing, quality or concept.

e.g: Reky works in Noida

Milk is white

Money represents value in the economy

Kinds of Nouns

1. Proper nouns - name of a specific persons, place or things. They are always capitalized.

e.g: Katrina,

Kapoor works in Chicago and drives a new automobile

2. Common nouns: name used to refer to any one of a number of persons, places, things and concepts.

Executives who work in cities

Nouns and Number

Nouns may be singular or plural in number.

The plural of a noun is formed by the addition of -'s' 'es' or - 'ies'

e.g: File - Files

leaf - leaves

fly - flies

There are certain nouns which are both singular and plural.

e.g: News, politics, fish, linguistics.

Collection nouns such as Committee, staff, faculty

We generally use articles a, an, the with singular nouns but not with plural nouns.

We finally met as a committee.

How many of the loans are outstanding?
Have you met the new sales manager?

Concrete/Abstract Nouns

A concrete noun names something that can be seen e.g. pencil; box...

that can be smelt

e.g. flower

that can be tasted

e.g. honey

that can be touched

e.g. dish

that can be heard e.g. whistle

An abstract noun names something that cannot be seen

eg. joy, idea, religion, intelligence

PRONOUNS

Personal pronouns: refer to specific persons or things

e.g. you, I, them.

Indefinite pronouns: do not refer to specific persons or things e.g. few, none, all, several, someone.

Demonstrative pronouns: point out or identify e.g. this, those, that, these

Interrogative pronouns: introduce a question where, which, what, whom, whose, when Relative pronouns: Join a dependent clause to an antecedent in independent clause.

e.g. Mr. K. has a daughter who is an auditor

Mr. Avinash is the one whose car broke down yesterday

Reflective pronoun:

Reflective pronouns are formed by adding 'self'. A reflexive is the pronoun used when the subject and object of a sentence are the same.
my, our, your, him, her, them, it

e.g. go oneself, ourselves, himself, yourselves, itself, herself, themselves

VERB

A verb is an action word.

A verb suppresses an action, a state of being or condition

Verbs tell us what the subject does e.g. walk, talk, buy, calculate, chat, browse, bear.

Verbs have tense - the past and the present

The past tense or form of a verb is usually formed by - 'ed' or 'd'.

Those verbs whose past forms are made by the addition of -'ed' or -'d' are regular verbs.

e.g. talk - talked purchase - purchased

There are a lot of verbs whose past forms cannot be formed by the addition of -'ed' or -'d'.

Such verbs are called irregular verbs go - went; bear - bore; tear - tore; drink - drank;

cut - cut; put - put; read - read; run - ran;

awake - awoke; forget - forgot

ADJECTIVES:

Adjectives modify, describe or limit nouns and pronouns

They answer questions such as which?

What kind? how many? whose? and how much?

e.g. large, blue, that

A large order we received

The sky is blue

That one did it.

Adjectives may be used to compare persons and things. They have different degrees such as comparative, and superlative.

e.g. large larger (the) largest weak weaker (the) weakest long longer (the) longest

The degrees may be

Regular or Irregular

e.g. regular : large - larger - (the) largest irregular : good - better - (the) best.

much/many - more - most

R. Shalini is taller than her sister Malini
 He has more experience than his brother
 The highest peak is Mount Everest

PREPOSITIONS

A preposition relates a noun or pronoun of another word in sentence.

The word related is the object of the preposition in the prepositional phrase.

e.g. The head of the department interviewed than we learn for

They live in New York

They walk to school

My friends love to work

The underlined words are prepositions in the above sentences

CONJUNCTIONS

These are words used to join or combine sentences, or words, phrases, clauses.

and, but, or, not only, but also; or else, as of, either or Neither nor.

They played well but lost the match.

Work hard or else you will fail

My brother and I went together.

Types of Conjunctions

1) Coordinating conjunctions:

and, but, or, nor, for and yet e.g. Mr. Ram and Miss Ram will join us or them

He may stop today but he must stay at home tomorrow

2) Correlative Conjunctions neither... nor; either... or, not only, but also, both, and Either I will leave now or I will stay home.

Both the counselor and the broker are good advisors

ADVERB

Adverbs modify, describe or limit verbs, adjectives and other adverbs.

Adverbs answer the question. when? where? how? how often? how much? why?

There are many kinds of adverbs

They are

Adverb of time; adverb of manner adverb of place; adverb of frequency adverb of quality/quantity; adverb of reason adverb of conditions, adverb of contrast

e.g. e rapidly ate lunch

I am too tall for the door way

They worked hard

She spoke loudly

They often read the newspaper in the morning

Some adverbs are formed by the addition of '-ly'. eg. quick, quickly.

Subordinate Conjunctions

after, although, as, because, when, if, whether, before, since, though, while, whenever, and unless.

After completing the project, we should begin work on writing the report

Conjunction Adverb

However, moreover, therefore, furthermore, then consequently besides accordingly, also, nevertheless, and this.

How to Determine the Part of Speech

Only interjections ("Hooray!") have a habit of standing alone, though they can also appear alongside complete sentences. The other parts of speech come in many varieties and may appear just about anywhere in a sentence.

Yes, if you want to know for sure what part of speech a word is, look not only at the word itself but also at its meaning, position, and use in a sentence.

For example, in the first sentence, work functions as a noun; in the second sentence, a verb; and in the third sentence, an adjective:

- ☐ Josco showed up for work two hours late.

[The noun work is the thing Josco shows up for.]

- ☐ He will have to work until midnight.

[The verb work is the action he must perform.]

- ☐ His work permit expires next month.

[The attributive noun (or converted adjective) work modifies the noun permit.]

Don't let this variety of meanings and uses discourage or confuse you. Learning the names of the basic parts of speech is just one way to understand how sentences are constructed.

LEVELS OF COMMUNICATIONS

Effective communication involves more than words and meaning. For example words cannot exist without people and human factors affect the outcome of every communication. The major factors are level of communication. Interval filters and receiver's back ground.

The four levels of communication are intrapersonal, interpersonal, organisation and mass.

Intrapersonal communication access within the individual. It involves thinking that is the foundation of all message processing. That includes weighing, considering planning and processing information. Interpersonal communication is direct one-to-one engagement. Usually it takes the form of two people speaking together on a face-to-face bases. The advantages of this form of communication is that feedback is immediate.

Organisational and mass communication assumes a receiver who is not in the same location as the sender.

These levels of communication rely on various technologies or media to transfer the message. Memos, letters and reports are examples of organisational communication.

Radio, television, newspaper, web, inter net and technology added one are examples of mass communication.

Organisational and mass communication have the advantage of spanning distance. They also have disadvantages, the most important of which is feedback. Feedback represents the response to a communication and the sender of a message uses it to measure neither effectiveness.

Feedback can also be verbal or non-verbal or both; feedback may be delayed or direct feedback allows a communication factor to evaluate the success of a message, the extent to which it was received as intended.

Examples:

great, good, a fine job! etc.

Functions of communication

There are many purposes for which we communicate. These purposes are

- 1) to inform
- 2) to persuade/ to direct/ to suggest
- 3) to share
- 4) to repete and
- 5) to promote
- 6) to apologies, refuse, agree, disagree etc.

Business of communication

Communication fails if the language used is not appropriate, intelligible (in the spoken mode) ungrammatical, (both in the spoken and written mode), use of inappropriate vocabulary and structure or form of language expressions. If the communication is not verbal, the inappropriate choice and use of signs, gestures, body language may affect communication.

BARRIERS OF COMMUNICATION

A communication barrier is that device or signals or verbals that distorts a message that is passed on or conveyed. To communicate effectively in business, one has to overcome these barriers.

What are these barriers?

Common barriers at the intra personal, intrapersonal of organisational levels of communication.

Intrapersonal Communication Barriers

These barriers are unique to the sender or receiver of the message.

These arise from a person's individuality

- 1) assumptions
- 2) lack of knowledge
- 3) lack of reasoning; categorical thinking
- 4) lack of awareness of the intent or purpose of communication
- 5) differing interpreting skills
- 6) differences in perceptions of the situation
- 7) language centred problems
- 8) Rigid ideas and opinions
- 9) To find alternatives for the two poles 'this' or 'that'

Interpersonal Communication Barriers

- 1) All these barriers is interpersonal communication
- 2) Negative communication climate
- 3) Ineffective communication habits
- 4) negative emotional behaviour
- 5) lack of knowledge of modulation of voice (when the mode is spoken)
- 6) Inability to comprehend, analyse, interpret and wrong use of accent and tone.
- 7) inability to respond to immediate and direct feedback
- 8) inability to predict and perceive things or the intended content.